"Bridge the Survival Gap"

Rethinking Response

Sector 10 is working to redefine the emergency response paradigm from centralized equipment staging to onsite pre-deployed resources, and is the only emergency response systems company so strongly emphasizing pre-deployed resources as the way to save lives and reduce liability.

Pre-deployment of assets enhances the escape from building entrapment and enables better extrication and treatment of victims at the scene. Adding the level of communications available within Sector 10's system will give the emergency response community the ability to link with the private sector expanding everyone's capabilities for success and self-sufficiency and increasing the life saving capability and survivability of the affected. Emergency Response Systems from Sector 10 represent a leap forward of unimaginable scales, providing not only a coordinated effort immediately apparent, but also establishing the expectation of pre-deployed tools as the standard in responding to emergency situations.
